

- Name: Han Chong Toh
Deputy Medical Director, National Cancer Centre Singapore (NCCS)
 - Current Position & Affiliation: Associate Professor, Cancer & Stem Cell Biology Program and SingHealth-Duke Global Health Institute
 - Country: Singapore
-

• Educational Background:

Graduated from the University of London, UK,
Intercalated Bachelor of Science in 'Infection and Immunity' from St Mary's Hospital Medical School

Qualified as a medical doctor from University of Cambridge, United Kingdom.

Fellowship of the Royal College of Physicians in 2003

medical oncology fellowship training - Singapore General Hospital, Massachusetts General Hospital, Harvard Medical School, Boston, USA

Research fellowship in cancer immunotherapy at the Center for Cell and Gene Therapy, Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, Texas, USA

He is an alumni of the Harvard Business School General Management Program.

• Professional Experience:

Deputy Medical Director, National Cancer Centre Singapore (NCCS)

Associate Professor, Cancer & Stem Cell Biology Program and SingHealth-Duke Global Health Institute

• Professional Organizations:

National Outstanding Clinician Scientist Award 2018
Member of the World Immunotherapy Council

Cancer Immunotherapy faculty of the European Society of Medical Oncology

He leads a National Large Collaborative Grant on virus-driven cancers prevalent in Asia such as hepatocellular carcinoma and nasopharyngeal cancer.

• Main Scientific Publications:

110 peer review papers

New England Journal of Medicine, Nature Reviews Clinical Oncology, Nature Genetics, Lancet Oncology, Journal of Clinical Oncology, Journal of Clinical Investigation, Journal of Hepatology, Molecular Therapy, Clinical Cancer Research and Cancer Gene Therapy.